As many of you know, Full House was without a doubt my favorite sitcom growing up, but shockingly, after all of the celebrity interviews, red carpet events, and premieres that I've done, I have yet to interview a single member of the cast. Well, that all changed Saturday night at the 2012 Creative Arts Emmy Awards, honoring the best--and most creative--talent behind-the-scenes of your favorite TV shows.

To my (awesome!) surprise, D.J. Tanner herself--Candace Cameron Bure--was walking the red carpet with her daughter, Natasha. Looking absolutely stunning in a floor-length navy gown (no small feat with temps in the triple digits), Candace was more than happy to talk about her Full House days, and her first Emmy experience (yes, this was it!)

Candace first told me how excited she was being mentioned in our slideshow of the Top 20 Most Memorable TV Hairstyles. "It was such a kick [seeing that]!"

Also exciting was her first Emmy appearance after more than 25 years in the business. "I'm here to support a movie that I executive produced called The Heart of Christmas. It is nominated for best original song by Matthew West." But come on, is this really her first Emmys? "I went to the People's Choice Awards and Golden Globes as a kid because of my brother [actor Kirk Cameron], but [not the Emmys]. So now I'm here!"

When we got to reminiscing about Full House, Candace admitted that her first kiss was on television!

Check this out:

Glamour: Was it with the paperboy, Ricky?

Candace Cameron Bure: I can't believe you even know that! [FYI, my editors are probably thinking, 'Yes we can!'] Wow! But it wasn't with the paperboy actually, it was the Spin the Bottle episode. At the very end, I have my first kiss in the backyard with Kevin.

Glamour: That's right! By the way, can I just tell you that because of the episode in Hawaii where you and Stephanie went swimming with the dolphins, I begged my parents to let me do it, and last year, I finally got my chance!

Candace: Wasn't it the best?

Glamour: Oh my gosh, the best! Because D.J. and Stephanie did it, I had to do it!
